Shifting the focus of femicide research: The challenges of studying perpetrators from a global sociological perspective

By Martín Hernán Di Marco. Over the past decades, gender-based violence has become a central topic in social sciences, as well as other academic fields.